

15 million years ago

Lush forests in what's now central Washington are gradually petrified, buried in volcanic ash. Near Spokane, a rhinoceros is covered with lava, leaving a rhino-shaped hole.

(That's Ginkgo Petrified Forest State Park and the Blue Lake Rhino! Check it out at the Burke!)